Toy Appraisal

by lilyveil1399 (clairespring7840)

Summary

"Phainon." The tips of Mydei's fingers dip into the flesh of his wrist, desperate. "Please."

Phainon hums, leans in just close enough for his lips to graze the other's ear. "Yielding already?"

If they weren't in the middle of Marmoreal Market, Phainon thinks Mydei might haul him over his shoulder to deter him from the sale in front of him. Might carry him off somewhere far more secluded and tease him just as relentlessly, if only to level the playing field.

It's quite amusing, Phainon considers. How all it took to tame the raging, tempestuous Crown Prince of Kremnos was having a toy in his ass.

“Mydei?”

It’s warm out, Kephale’s dawn showering sunlight down upon the streets and stalls of Okhema’s Marmoreal Market. Phainon’s gaze slides from the ornate shield in his grasp to the antique vase caught between bronze gauntlets, the Crown Prince of Kremnos lingering at his side as he examines it with a careful eye.

“Hm?”

“What’ve you got there?”

Mydei purses his lips, squints. Dark brows pinch over the fine bridge of his nose as he scrutinizes the characters that’ve been chiseled into clay.

“It looks to be genuine. The Kremnoan text reads correctly. As for the painting and technique…”

There’s a lilt to his voice as he trails off, like Mydei isn’t certain, like he’s even a bit ashamed to be so unsure. It’s nothing to be ashamed of, Phainon thinks as leans in to peer over his shoulder. Mydei was hardly a babe when he was forced out of his homeland. What relics he has seen of his lost civilization are nothing but shattered fragments that litter the ruins of Castrum Kremnos.

Phainon brushes his knuckles over the slope of Mydei’s shoulder before the other can linger on such thoughts for too long, notes the faint hitch in the warrior’s breath as he shifts his weight from one foot to the other with shoulders drawn taut. Every movement is rigid, body tensed, and Phainon can’t keep the smirk out of his voice when he speaks.

“Might I take a look? You know I’ve quite the pasttime when it comes to appraisals of such things.”

“And don’t you also make it a point to whine about how many fakes you’ve accumulated over the years?”

But Mydei huffs his consent all the same, a pink tinge to the nape of his neck. That color spreads past his shoulders, dapples his chest. Another shift, another hitch in his breath as his weight settles low in his hips.

Phainon knows, of course. He knows what's got Mydeimos so agitated, composure wound tight, and he hums and dares to brush his lips against the curve of his shoulder, a barely-there tease.

He knows that the innocent passerby will avert their gaze, will turn away at the sight of two Chrysos Heirs engaging in such public displays of affection. They always do, and — though Mydei usually swats him away to keep from fueling the city's many gossipers and their wagging tongues — he's painfully still, like something has him rooted on the spot.

Mydei shivers in the midday heat; Phainon chuckles at that, a rumbling thing deep in his chest.

"So flustered, Mydeimos. Are you well?"

"Shut. Up." Mydei grits his teeth, amber eyes narrowed beneath dark lashes, shooting daggers.

If Phainon weren't so certain that there was no real threat to be had, he might find it in himself to be a little concerned. But Mydei decides to yield to save face, to let Phainon test his limits a bit more in the bustling city square, and fingers trail over the wide expanse of his back as Phainon steps around him. Another tease, another simmering glare cast in his direction.

Phainon arches an appreciative brow, brilliant gaze flickering from his trembling fingers wrapped about the vase's handles to the goosebumps that litter Mydei's bare biceps. It settles on a dusky pair of nipples, pebbled even in the brilliant warmth of the Lucid Hour.

He swallows; Phainon swears that the air feels a bit hotter, a bit thicker. Because Mydeimos looks positively divine like this, all strung out, and Phainon's patience wears thinner than one of Aglaea's threads at the sight.

Fingers delve into his pocket as he speaks, a cheeky grin tacked onto his features. “Here. Why don’t you let me have a look?”

Phainon taps a finger against that curved stone hidden in his pocket without so much as a warning. It warms, hums gently against his hip, and his lips twitch as the faintest gasp flits between Mydei’s teeth, bronze-clad fingers tightening dangerously about the vase. He plucks it from his hands, worried that the clay might shatter beneath such a desperate grip.

“Deliverer.”

“What?” He teases innocently.

“Phainon.”

Phainon hums, wraps a gentle arm about Mydei’s waist as he trembles. He knows it must be overwhelming. He’s picked the most intense setting, after all, curious to see if such a thing lives up to its more-than-stellar reviews. A whine catches in Mydei’s throat as he tries desperately to swallow it down, painfully aware of every passerby, of Theodoros as he tends to his shop no more than a couple of feet away.

Phainon’s words drip from his lips warmly, syrupy sweet.

“Need to return to your chambers already?”

Do you yield?

But Phainon knows better. Mydei is staunch in his belief that victory must be earned, in believing that surrender is a nonstarter until it is the only option to be had, at least where such indecent situations are concerned.

“Let me finish appraising this piece, yes? I want to see if it’s genuine. Perhaps it might be worth an offer, assuming it’s to your liking.”

Mydei couldn’t give a damn about some vase, not now, not with pleasure prickling at the base of his spine as that toy torments his prostate, an ever-present hum that settles in the back of his skull.

“I-I —“

It won’t grant Mydei any sense of relief to resort to prematurely begging, and he stifles whatever plea dangles on the tip of his tongue with a scowl. Bronze fingertips graze over Phainon’s hip, bite into it for support as his knees wobble.

Phainon considers playing nice, debates letting Mydei hang off his shoulder as the toy hums deep inside of him against that elusive nub. But what kind of victory would that be, if he grants the Crown Prince of Kremnos mercy so quickly?

Phainon shifts just out of reach, leaves Mydei grasping at air with a bitten off curse. He watches him take a shaky step backward, leaning against one of the many stone pillars that line the shop.

To the untrained eye, Mydei appears to be reserved and withdrawn, a silent observer drinking in the bustling marketplace. But there’s a scarlet tinge to the tips of his ears, his palm pressed against his lips, cupping his chin as the other wraps about his waist and the tips of his gauntlets worry the skin of his ribcage.

How needy.

Phainon’s fingers dip into his pocket, rest against the stone that thrums against his hip. He taps it as he sets the vase atop Theodoros’s table, watches from the corner of his eye as Mydei’s composure shatters at the loss. The stone stills, grows cool to the touch, and Mydei chokes out a cough and reaches for the stone pillar behind him blindly.

He hadn’t been all that amenable to the idea of a toy at first. It had taken some coaxing, some teasing, and Mydei had perused each and every review with a skeptical eye.

Phainon supposed it was likely to do with the toy’s manufacturing. There’s certainly a degree of taboo to be acknowledged, what with its abilities being derived from Janus’s holy blessings. Mydei’d wrinkled his nose at such a thing, cheeks flushed scarlet.

To take a divine blessing and turn it into something meant for sinful pleasure? How blasphemous.

Apparently, Flying Amphora have far more uses than just increasing a person's walking speed, something neither Phainon nor Mydei had ever considered. It was quite a shock to learn that there was an entire market dedicated to exploring the possibilities such blessings presented.

Mydei had been wary at first, and Phainon curious. It'd taken some prodding, some goading, the occasional, "What, is the Crown Prince of Kremnos not up to such a challenge? And here I thought 'defeat' didn't exist within your vocabulary."

He'd folded quickly after that.

Amber eyes simmer, honey-colored embers, and Phainon arches a brow at the hazy glare Mydei shoots his way as Theodoros cocks his head at the vase in front of him. It seems the reviews weren't lying, after all.

"Looking to buy? This piece is the real deal, came in all the way from the ruins of Castrum Kremnos. And it's in one piece! As such, I can only accept top offers."

"Aw, really? No discounts for the renowned Chrysos Heirs?" Phainon chirps.

He doesn't actually mind, has more than enough credits to cover the cost, but the longer that he draws things out, the more desperate his beloved Mydei will become. And he's always far more agreeable when he's a little desperate, Phainon thinks with warm cheeks and a crooked grin.

"Why don't you take a closer look, my friend."

He taps the stone in his pocket once more and sets it to the lowest setting, drums his fingers against the woodgrain to drown out the gentle humming of it against his hip.

Phainon doesn't have to look to know that Mydei is squirming. It gives him a worrisome amount of satisfaction, keeping his back to him, knowing that the other is undone at his behest without sparing so much as a glance.

"I think there's definitely some chipping, and the quality of the paint has faded." He continues without missing a beat, eyes sparkling. "I think that serves as more than enough reason to knock down the price."

"Right," Theodoros nods his head, gives a friendly — albeit uncomfortable — chuckle, "I-I suppose I could take a look. You just might be surpassing me in my own trade."

"I doubt that's possible, Theodoros. I may be a good student, but surely not good enough to surpass you."

Phainon does, after all, have a tendency to fall victim to fakes.

The shopkeeper rummages around in his briefcase for his loupe before scrutinizing the piece, bent in half over it as he peers at the lettering. The lip of the counter bites into Phainon's forearms as he leans against it, brushes his bangs from his face as he considers.

"Though, I suppose being a student at all would mean that I qualify for a student discount?"

Something cool and insistent prods the small of Phainon's back. It's a pointed touch, urgent enough that he straightens and casts a glance over his shoulder as Theodoros rubs at the back of his neck with another awkward chuckle.

Honeyed amber clashes with azure blue, and Phainon's lips twitch. "Can I help you, Mydeimos?"

Oh, but Mydei is a wreck.

His lips are pink and freshly-bitten from stifling whatever piteous noises threatened to spill from them. The ample swell of his chest rises and falls in a stuttering rhythm, splotches of color marring his complexion. He sways as he stands, like his center of balance has been thrown off, like he's hardly able to keep upright at all, and Phainon's cock twitches in interest.

On any other day, perhaps he'd feel a little guilty for putting his dear Mydei through such unrelenting torment. But it only serves to further the tension in his gut, a warmth that licks up the knobs of his spine and has him shifting to hide the growing bulge in his trousers.

Theodoros looms over the vase, thoroughly focused, and Mydei takes the opportunity to murmur in his ear.

"Phainon." The tips of Mydei's fingers dip into the flesh of his wrist, desperate. "Please."

Phainon hums, leans in just close enough for his lips to graze the other's ear. "Yielding already?"

If they weren't in the middle of Marmoreal Market, Phainon thinks Mydei might haul him over his shoulder to deter him from the sale in front of him. Might carry him somewhere far more secluded and tease him just as relentlessly, if only to level the playing field.

There's a frustrated, desperate haze to his gaze, and Phainon turns his back to the counter. He shouldn't surrender so easily, not when it's only been a handful of minutes since he'd initiated this little game. But Mydei's expression is broken and his face a brilliant shade of pink, and Phainon relents.

He reaches into his pocket, taps that stone twice. He can't help but marvel at the way Mydei tenses, stifling a gasp as he goes rigid. It's quite amusing, Phainon considers. That all it took to tame the raging, tempestuous Crown Prince of Kremnos was having a toy in his ass.

"How does 25,000 credits sound?"

Phainon hardly hears Theodoros at all, thinks the amount he hastily hands him is well over 40,000. "Done."

Phainon tucks the vase beneath an arm, gives a friendly nod, and all too quickly Mydei is trudging from the stall and beelining for one of the rear alleys. There are a handful of chambers that line the alleyway that serve to house overstock, and Phainon arches a brow as Mydei halts at one doorway in particular. It's hidden by a folded screen, midnight panels acting as partitions to keep the storage chamber private.

The stone in his pocket still thrums, a constant, teasing edge, and Mydei's palm splays out against the stone wall at his side as he shudders. He won't look at Phainon, won't spare him so much as a glance, and that earns a frown.

For a moment, Phainon worries that he's overstepped. That this ridiculous, inappropriate game isn't to Mydei's liking at all. He slips his fingers into his pocket, hovering over that warm, vibrating remote.

"Mydei?"

No answer. His shoulders sag as the Kremnoan's body convulses, as a gasp flits between his teeth. But Mydei doesn't turn, and Phainon reaches out to rest a grounding palm against his hip.

"…Mydeimos, if I've overstepped — "

"Stop talking."

"Really, though," Phainon places the vase at his feet, casts a precursory glance about the alley to ensure they're alone, "I can turn it off."

Mydei turns, thorny gaze piercing through his insides, and Phainon's heart drops to his stomach. Bronze-tipped fingers fist at his jacket, and the Crown Prince all but drags him behind the screen and into the storage chamber without another word.

"M-Mydeimo— !"

Lips are on his, warm and soft and desperate. Mydei's a furnace, burning up beneath his minimal clothing, feverish to the touch. Phainon can feel the heat rolling off him in waves, bare hands trailing up the fine curve of his waist.

There's a sheen of sweat that shines along his forehead, wisps of blond clinging to the nape of his neck, and Phainon groans and buries his fingers in his hair. He trails his tongue over his lower lip, smiles into the kiss as notes of spiced pomegranate flood his senses.

Mydei nips, stifles another whine as he leans back to breathe. He's flushed from the shoulders down, color dappling his chest, the swell of his pectorals, highlighting a dusky nipple that peeks from beneath his attire.

"Overwhelmed, are we?" Phainon can't keep the satisfaction out of his tone, a breathy chuckle teetering on his tongue.

Mydei purses his lips, pouts as another shiver wracks his broad frame. "I didn't think a toy such as this would — "

"Do you not like to be teased, after all?"

"Hmph." And then, "…That's not — "

"I see, so you do enjoy it." Phainon hums appreciatively, steps into Mydei's space and nuzzles his temple as he palms at his waist, his muscles. "Look at you, Mydeimos, already such a mess."

Phainon's right, of course. Mydei is a disheveled, panting wreck. Crimson tips of his hair catch in dark lashes as amber eyes grow molten, syrupy, needy. Every shift of the toy inside him has his hips swaying subconsciously, like he's seeking out friction he cannot have, and even that nudges it more directly against his prostate.

"Haikas."

"No need to be so prickly." Phainon purrs sweetly. "I'm just as relieved to see it lives up to its stellar reviews as you are."

His gaze sweeps about the dim room as his eyes adjust, a myriad of shadows slowly giving way to more discernible objects. The place is chalked full of furniture, chairs and tables stacked atop each other. There are several recliners, chaises, various loungers. They must've stumbled into the storage chamber for a furnishing brand, he thinks with a quirk of a brow.

"Phainon." Mydei huffs, buries his face in his shoulder. Another shudder, another reedy sigh.

Phainon urges him back a step, and another, and another until they're tucked into the back corner of the room, away from the entrance. He won't risk anyone seeing them like this, can only imagine what Aglaea would say. Phainon winces at the mere thought of it, but his thoughts don't linger on such things for long.

Mydei is in need, after all, and he'd be a poor partner if he were to leave him wanting.

"Care to sit with me, Mydei?"

Phainon rests atop one of the chaises, reclines until he's relaxed against the cushions, thighs spread in an effort to accommodate. Mydei hesitates, fingers furling and unfurling into fists at his sides as he debates. The corners of Phainon's lips curl a bit more wickedly as his fingers delve into his pocket, and he taps that stone until the vibrations against his hip are loud enough to hear.

Mydei looses a gasp, knees weak, and he clambers atop the chaise with a begrudging groan. The itch to go further is a tantalizing thing, Mydei reclined against his chest and his ass pressed against the cradle of his hips.

There's a flash of heat low in Phainon's belly as his dick stirs once more in his pants, half-hard, and he taps the stone thrice until the vibrations lessen to something gentler. Mydei catches a lip between his teeth, eyes fluttering shut, and he gives an instinctive roll of his hips to tease.

"C-Careful, Deliverer. I doubt we'd be able to get away with much more than this."

Phainon laughs in earnest, wraps both arms about Mydei's waist to draw them flush together. "I think you'd be right about that. Best not to risk it."

Fingers trace every dip and valley of Mydei's abdomen, trail higher to cup the swell of his chest. Phainon listens to his breath hitch, that toy still thrumming against his hip, and he gives a teasing roll of his hips against Mydei's ass that has the Kremnoan gasping and scrabbling at the velvet of the chaise with bronze-tipped fingers.

"Phainon."

"You sound upset. I thought we'd established you enjoy being teased."

Phainon relents all the same, presses his lips to the juncture of Mydei's throat and ghosts his fingertips over his nipples, pebbled and pert. "Is this what you wanted, Mydeimos? To be touched?"

Mydei shifts in his grasp, a whine caught in his throat. Phainon relishes the way he sinks deeper into him, praise seeping into his bones and making him warm, pliant.

"You've certainly earned it. Such a wonderful job you've done today, keeping quiet with that toy inside you all afternoon."

He's laying it on thick, he knows he is, but it seems to matter little. Mydei's head falls back as Phainon's nails scrape against his nipples with a sigh, every word punctuated by a gentle, teasing roll of his hips. Phainon presses his lips to his shoulders, the flushed nape of his neck, the shell of his ear. Anywhere within reach, though he'd much prefer to turn the warrior in his lap around to face him if it meant he'd get to trap one of those sensitive buds between his teeth.

Phainon drags the heels of his hands down his chest until they catch on Mydei's nipples. He sinks his teeth into the soft spot just over Mydei's clavicle, marvels at the flash of pleasure that ignites in his abdomen at the way the warrior's back bows in response. He laves his tongue over his skin, soothes the throbbing bruise he's left behind in its wake.

“Mydei.” Phainon groans in response, trapping both nipples between his thumb and forefinger. He rolls them gently, delights in the way Mydei’s body trembles beneath his touch.

The thing about Phainon is that he’s always — regrettably — been a bit of a babbler during sex, not that Mydei minds. The praise goes straight to his dick, settles warmly between his ears, has him preening beneath the other’s touches for more.

“So good, Mydei, s-so good for me.”

Mydei whimpers as Phainon alternates between palming at the plush of his pectorals and catching those pert buds between his fingers. He tugs until he’s rewarded with another whimper, thumbs at them until they’re hard and begging for attention.

He snakes a hand down his abdomen, fingertips catching the waistband of his pants. Phainon wraps a hand firmly about Mydei’s wrist, nips at his shoulder in warning as that toy thrums deep within him. He doesn’t want him finishing, not yet, and it earns a sigh of frustration as Mydei arches.

Phainon’s brows pinch over the bridge of his noise as Mydei rocks directly against him, a sigh flitting between his teeth. It must be infuriating, to be so desperate for friction and to be denied it all the same, that vibrator a dull, lulling pressure. Not quite enough to bring him to the edge, but just enough to keep him suspended so very close to it, just out of reach.

“P-Phainon, I — ”

Phainon releases one of his nipples, catches Mydei’s jaw between his thumb and forefinger to urge their mouths together. It’s a little sloppy, the angle less than stellar, but Mydei whines all the same as he licks into his mouth.

“Not yet, Mydeimos.” Phainon hums when he pulls away, stroking his thumb over his cheek as his other hand halts its torment and dips into his pocket. “You can hold out a bit longer for me, can’t you?”

He taps the stone in his pocket once, twice, feels it thrum to life against his hip. Mydei jolts, gasping, and that flush along his shoulders deepens to scarlet.

“Let’s see how long you can last, Crown Prince of Kremnos.”

Phainon begins a brutal routine, every whine and whimper that drips from Mydei’s tongue settling low in his belly. One hand splays out over Mydei’s abdomen as the other settles in his pocket over the remote, lips trailing along the crimson tattoos that decorate his skin.

Phainon taps once, watches Mydei convulse and gasp for air as his hips stutter. He taps twice, lessens the setting, and earns a bitten off curse in reply as Mydei grinds against air, against nothing.

It’s a tortuous routine. One tap, watch in delight as Mydei nears the edge of his release; two taps, toy with his nipples as he groans in frustration at being denied, repeat it all again until he’s panting and writhing in his lap.

Mydei stifles a cry, rocks backward desperately. Like if he teases Phainon enough, he might finally earn that sweet release he taunts him with. It’s tempting, of course, and Phainon sucks a lip between his teeth as the warrior grinds against his weeping, aching cock.

But this isn’t about him, this is about Mydei. Beloved Mydei, Crown Prince of Kremnos Mydei, Mydeimos the Undying, his Mydei—

Another pointed grind of Mydei’s hips against the throbbing length of him and Phainon shivers, whines. Dark lashes knit together as he buries his face against the fine, toned muscles of Mydei’s back. Mydei seems unbearably intent on forcing his hand, it would seem, and Phainon just can’t have that.

He swipes the pad of a finger against that stone and it stills in an instant, cool against his hip.

Mydei lurches forward, gives a strangled cry of frustration as he scrabbles at the velvet cushions. Phainon wraps his arms securely about his waist, sinks his teeth into the meat of his shoulder as the Kremnoan trembles and his thighs quiver, caught at the edge of the precipice with nothing to topple him over it.

He draws him close, worries a nipple with the pad of his thumb as he rocks his hips up against him. It's the fourth — no, fifth?— time that he's brought Mydei to the edge, only to yank him from it in an instant.

"Deliverer." Mydei growls, gravelly tone low in his chest.

Phainon hums sweetly, presses kisses to the fresh mark he's left behind, skin a lovely shade of pink. "Ask nicely?"

He trails a hand down past Mydei's navel, slips a thumb beneath the waistband of his pants. Scarlet curls tickle his knuckles as he delves a bit deeper, the furious, weeping length of him trapped beneath his clothes.

"Please, Phainon."

Phainon hums, brushes his lips along the shell of his ear until the other shivers. "That's better."

He makes quick work of his zipper, tugs him from his pants with relative ease. Mydei's scalding to the touch, silken and wet in his palm. His cock twitches in the cool air, a string of precum running down his knuckles. That alone is enough to have Phainon rutting desperately against him, thumbing at the tip as Mydei looses a sigh of relief.

"Take what you need, Mydeimos." Phainon hollows his fingers, a loose channel about him. "You're doing so good for me."

Mydei tries. Kephale above, does he try, fucking up into his fist. It's a clumsy rhythm, the angle less than ideal, and his hips thrust upward into Phainon's hand as a whimper drips from his tongue.

It earns a shudder, Phainon's dick twitching as Mydei rocks against him, a gentle, mounting pressure in his gut. He reaches down with his free hand, taps desperately at that stone with shaky fingers until finally one sticks the landing.

The toy thrums intensely against his hip. It's the highest setting, and it's most certainly enough to catch Mydei off guard. He convulses in his grasp, quivers as his lips part in a soundless cry of relief, skin feverish to the touch.

Phainon's tongue grows loose as pleasure burns through him. It cascades down his spine, whitehot and threatening to burst through his insides.

"M-Mydei, Mydeimos, that's it, just like that — "

The Kremnoan gasps hoarsely, writhes and rocks his hips against his weeping length until Phainon's composure shatters and the coil in his belly snaps in two. Cum floods his undergarments, sticky against his skin, and he moves his fist in earnest as Mydei whimpers.

"Mydei — " Phainon gasps, broken, "— my dearest Mydei, cum for me?"

The line of Mydei's body draws taut at that, hips stuttering once, twice. A hand wraps firmly about Phainon's fingers, urges them tight beneath the head of his cock as ropes of cum spurt from the tip and soil the velvet cushions beneath them.

Mydei pants as his orgasm crashes through him, nerves alight and eyes sewn shut in pleasure. He always looks so pretty when he cums, Phainon thinks, marveling at the expression of ecstasy that breaks over his features.

Phainon releases his hold on his flagging length as soon as it subsides, splays a palm over Mydei's belly possessively and draws him close. Fingers shake as the slip into his pocket, tapping until the stone grows cold and still, and Mydei pants softly in the still of the room.

Mydei's always quiet in the aftermath, not that Phainon minds. He's warm and pliant in the wake of his release, and Phainon presses a soothing kiss over the vein in his neck that thrums with his immortal pulse.

He'll have to see what other toys are on that blasphemous market, Phainon thinks with a twitch of his lips, forehead resting against Mydei's shoulder.

And he’ll definitely need to leave a glowing review for this one.
