Because It’s You

Posted originally on the Archive of Our Own at http://archiveofourown.org/works/67054558.

Rating:
Explicit

Archive Warning:
No Archive Warnings Apply

Category:
M/M

Fandom:
崩坏：星穹铁道 | Honkai: Star Rail (Video Game)

Relationship:
Mydei/Phainon (Honkai: Star Rail)

Characters:
Mydei (Honkai: Star Rail), Phainon (Honkai: Star Rail), Stelle (Honkai: Star Rail)

Additional Tags:
Established Relationship, Switching, First Time Bottoming, Revenge, Humor, Fisting, Teasing, Dirty Talk, Thighs, Humiliation, Fingerfucking, Sex Toys, Voyeurism, Filming, Top Mydei/Bottom Phainon (Honkai: Star Rail)

Language:
English

Series:
Part 6 of Myphaiweek 2025

Stats:
Published: 2025-07-01 Words: 11,818 Chapters: 1/1

Because It’s You

by Lunaeryi

Summary

> A throwaway comment about switching should’ve gone nowhere. But Phainon made the mistake of bringing it up again, and Mydei, ever the opportunist, decided to make an evening of it. A very long, very well-documented evening.
>
> Or in which Phainon’s mouth writes a check his ass absolutely cannot cash.

Notes

> Oh god this one is actually a bit embarrassing for me, I might delete it in a few hours😭
>
> I couldn’t fully beta read this without dying a bit inside so please point out any mistakes you see throughout :’)

See the end of the work for more notes

The sun was brutal overhead, even through the thick canopy of charred branches. The last Titankin’s body still steamed a few meters away, ichor puddling around its twisted limbs. The air smelled like hot metal and scorched marrow.

Phainon nudged one of the scattered weapons with the tip of his boot, watching it roll before coming to rest against a half-crushed ribcage. He blew out a slow breath, then wiped a hand across his brow.

“Not bad,” he muttered to himself.

A soft thud landed behind him as Stelle hopped down from a boulder, her teleslate already in hand, thumbs moving as she scrolled. Probably through some ridiculous feed of Council memes or cursed fan edits. Knowing her.

She didn’t look up. “Yeah, yeah. Big sword. Bigger dick. You done flexing for the invisible audience, or do you need a slow clap?”

Phainon laughed. “C’mon, partner. You gotta admit, that was nice.”

“You always say that after every kill,” she said, popping a dried fig into her mouth from a pouch at her hip. “Doesn’t make it less true. You’re still a showoff.”

“I’m efficient,” he corrected, grinning as he fell in step beside her.

“Same difference.”

They walked a ways in comfortable silence. The forest was starting to quiet now that the fighting was over—only the occasional drip of water and rustling leaves overhead. Stelle scrolled absently, her eyes flicking down at the teleslate while Phainon let his mind drift.

And, as it usually did, it drifted to him.

He smiled to himself, gaze unfocused. “You should see the way the sweat runs down his back when he fights shirtless,” he said, almost dreamily. “Gods, what a sight.”

Stelle let out a long, suffering groan and tilted her head back like she was asking the sky for strength. “Bro.”

Phainon blinked, pulling himself out of his little fantasy. “What?”

“You are so down bad it’s physically painful,” she said, side-eyeing him. “If he wasn’t already fucking you, I don’t think I could be around you without clawing my own ears off.”

Phainon’s face stayed exactly the same—that easy, confused little smile. “I don’t get what you mean, partner.”

Stelle stopped walking.

Like, full-body stopped. She just stared at him for a second, blinking. “Wait. Wait, wait, wait. You’ve never taken it up the ass, have you?”

He tilted his head, eyebrows drawing together like a confused puppy. “… I… no? Mydei seems fine with things as they are.”

A pause.

Then Stelle snorted so hard she almost choked on the fig she’d just eaten. She coughed, slapped her chest, then burst out laughing.

“Oh my gods. You’re serious.”

Phainon was still looking at her like she was the weird one. “What?”

“That’s a fucking crime,” she wheezed, already pulling her teleslate back out. “Jesus. Alright, hang on. Tip number one.” She started sketching without fanfare—a crude, ugly little anatomical diagram of an ass with some arrows and what looked like a cartoon plug.

Phainon raised both eyebrows. “I don’t think Aglaea sanctioned this part of the mission.”

“Doesn’t matter,” Stelle said, not looking up. “She’s not here.”

He squinted at the slate as she zoomed in to add a little star next to the word prep and what might've been a badly drawn peach emoji.

"You don't have to look so horrified," she added, glancing up. "You should be honored. Not everyone gets to benefit from my wisdom."

"I mean…" Phainon scratched the back of his head, still peering at the diagram. "It never really came up. Mydei's comfortable with our arrangement."

Stelle made a face. "Yeah, 'cause you never brought it up. And you, my friend, are depriving the man of an experience. Or yourself. Or both. I don't know your life. But you are built for this."

She gave him a pointed once-over, smug grin on her face. Phainon hummed, thoughtful but still uncertain, gaze dropping to the sketch again.

"I guess…" he mumbled. "I don't know. Not sure I'd be any good at it."

"Dude," she said flatly. "It's literally your ass. Not a skill check. Just loosen up."

She shoved the teleslate back into her pocket, turned, and started walking again, unbothered.

Phainon stayed standing there for a second longer, frowning after her, the ghost of a smile tugging at his lips.

Then, under his breath, half-laughing to himself:

"…Huh."

And he followed.

A couple days passed.

Or maybe three. Phainon wasn't exactly keeping track. Time blurred in Okhema when you weren't chasing titankin or chasing Mydei.

But for whatever reason, that conversation with Stelle wouldn't leave his head.

He didn't even mean to think about it. It just crept in. During patrols, during breakfast, during bathhouse visits, when he was minding his own business polishing his blade…

You've never taken it up the ass, have you?

Phainon groaned, throwing his head back against the wall behind his bed, one leg slung over the other. It wasn't like he'd avoided the idea—it just never came up. Phainon had always led, and it was good. Really fucking good. Why mess with perfection?

Still.

"That's a shame."

Stelle's smug little voice played again like a bad teleslate ad you couldn't skip. Worse, she'd been messaging him.

He grabbed his slate off the nightstand and scrolled.

[STELLE | 11:11AM]
Bet u thought about it.

[STELLE | 2:04PM]
It's all abt prep

[STELLE | 7:00PM]
Ask him yet???

Phainon didn't dignify a single one with a reply, but the fact that he hadn't blocked her said plenty. He wasn't about to admit that the idea had started rooting itself in the back of his head like a weed.

It wasn't even about the position, really. It was about… well. Mydei. The thought of him doing that. How serious he got, how good he was with his mouth, his hands, how he could turn Phainon inside out with a glance if he really wanted to.

He shut his eyes for a second too long.

“Damn it.”

A soft ping from the slate snapped him out of it.

He looked down.

[MYDEI | 3:36PM]
Training grounds. If you’re free.

Phainon grinned, immediate, no hesitation.

There he was.

For the record, the world was still mostly on fire. The Black Tide had the rifts churning at the borders, titankin were crawling out of holes no one remembered digging, and the Council were still a bunch of tight-assed bureaucrats pretending they weren’t three weeks from a full collapse.

But apparently there’d been a break in the tides. Some rift east of Kremnos destabilized and forced the spawn lines to shift, giving Mydei space to move. It was the kind of temporary respite nobody questioned—you took the win, even if it was cosmic bad luck for someone else.

Phainon didn’t care about the logistics. It meant more Mydei in Okhema, and that was all that mattered.

He thumbed out a reply.

[PHAINON | 3:37PM]
Always free for you.

And it hit him, all at once—fuck. Now he was definitely going to think about it while sparring. Probably while Mydei was sweaty and pissed off and looking too good for a man that lethal.

He groaned again, dragging a hand down his face.

“This is your fault, Stelle,” he muttered to no one.

Coat on, blade strapped, teleslate pocketed—and out the door.

The sun was brutal overhead, air thick with the metallic tang of sweat and dust.

Phainon ducked under a wide arc of Mydei’s blade, feeling the whoosh of displaced air skim past his ear. He grinned, pivoting on his heel, and brought the flat of his own blade up in a lazy parry.

“Getting slow, Mydei,” Phainon teased, breath steady despite the heat. “Or maybe you’re just used to swinging at titankin who don’t hit back.”

Mydei’s mouth quirked sharply. “You’re stalling.”

Phainon winked. “Maybe.”

Their swords clashed again, a clean strike and block that rang out across the yard. A few passing guards slowed to watch—not every day you saw the Deliverer and the Undying Prince go head to head.

Phainon could admit it: sparring with Mydei was one of the few things in the world that made him forget about everything else.

Which was probably why he didn’t notice Mydei’s feint until it was too late.

The bastard kicked his legs out from under him, and Phainon went down hard, back hitting the earth with a dull thud. Before he could even curse, Mydei was on him—a knee braced to either side of his hips, one hand pressing down on his chest, victorious and smug as hell.

“I win,” Mydei said simply, satisfied.

Phainon huffed out a laugh, head tipped back in the dirt. “Tch. Gloat about it, why don’t you.”

Mydei raised a brow, the corner of his mouth twitching. “I am.”

Phainon made a show of flexing his arms up, hands finding Mydei’s waist, fingers squeezing lightly like he could haul him off. But he didn’t. The grin he wore was teasing—though something about the weight of Mydei above him made his chest go a little tight.

And maybe that was what reminded him.

He hesitated. His grip on Mydei’s waist eased. His thumb dragged absently over the muscle there, like he was thinking about something else entirely.

“…Hey,” Phainon started, the word catching a little in his throat. He cleared it, trying for casual. “You ever, uh…”

Mydei’s brow arched, curious.

Phainon rolled his head to the side, staring up at the sky like it’d give him the right phrasing. “You ever think about… me being underneath?”

The words hung there a second too long.

He winced internally. Gods, that sounded weird. Awkward, clunky—the kind of thing Stelle would tease him for later if she’d heard it.

Mydei stilled. The humor faded from his face, brow knitting with a quiet furrow as he shifted his weight slightly. He didn’t move off him, didn’t say anything right away.

The silence stretched.

Phainon felt his stomach flip. The longer Mydei stayed quiet, the worse the knot in his chest got.

“I mean—” Phainon tried to backpedal, quick and clumsy. “Not a big thing, just… popped into my head. Figured you might not be into it. Which is fine, you know, you seem good with how things are. I don’t wanna mess with something that’s working. So forget I said anything—”

“I didn’t say no.”

It cut clean through his rambling.

Phainon blinked, surprised enough to stop talking. He met Mydei’s gaze, finding it unreadable.

Mydei let a beat pass, then tilted his head, something thoughtful flickering in his expression. When he spoke again, his voice was quieter, almost deliberate. The way he got before battle. Or before doing something reckless.

“To be clear,” Mydei murmured, “if you’re offering this… you’re giving me permission to get creative.”

Phainon squinted up at him. “Creative how?”

A flicker of something crossed Mydei’s face. He leaned in a fraction, enough that his shadow fell over Phainon’s face.

“You’ll find out.”

Phainon hesitated, working his jaw, torn between egotistical bravado and something like nerves. Then he shrugged, that old smirk sliding back into place. “Yeah. Sure. Knock yourself out.”

Mydei’s mouth curved, all teeth now.

“Be careful what you ask for, Deliverer.”

And with that, Mydei pushed to his feet, offering a hand down.

Phainon took it, an odd crawling feeling settling in his gut as Mydei hauled him up with ease. He dusted himself off, throwing a glance over his shoulder as Mydei walked ahead—a slow, unhurried gait, as if already planning something.

He should’ve known better.

And that’s how this whole situation started.

Now Phainon sat in a council chamber, trying to look like a respectable, put-together Deliverer while there was a thick, buzzing plug lodged so deep in his ass he could feel it against his spine.

He kept his face neutral. A little bored, even. That’s what he was good at—sitting through these petty debates between old bastards and pretending not to fantasize about breaking their chairs over their heads.

Today though? He wasn’t thinking about that.

He was thinking about how the plug inside him had been still for most of the meeting—just there, the stretch of it keeping him constantly, unbearably aware of his own body. Every shift of his hips made it drag over something that made his gut clench. Every breath made his hole twitch around it.

Then, while Aganos droned on about trade routes or defensive positioning, the remote set it off.

A mean vibration that went straight to his nerves and made him see black spots.

Phainon’s throat caught. He held his expression steady, but his stomach dropped, his cock giving a pathetic little pulse in his pants.

He bit down on the inside of his cheek. The buzz lasted two seconds, but it was enough to make sweat bead under his collar.

“Deliverer,” Aganos glared, “your opinion?”

Phainon forced his eyes up. “On what?” Too sharp.

Aganos narrowed his eyes.

Phainon cleared his throat, dragging on that perfected smile. “Oh—sorry, your voice put me to sleep. Something about roads?”

A few council members snorted. Someone made a sound of disapproval.

And right then, the plug kicked up again.

Higher this time. A steady vibration that made his hole clench involuntarily, made his thighs tense so tight he thought he might cramp.

Phainon swallowed a sound and shifted in his seat. Bad idea. The motion shoved it in deeper, the pressure grinding against something that made his stomach knot.

His cock was rock-hard now, straining against the inside of his pants.

Fuck.

His teleslate buzzed against his thigh.

[MYDEI | 9:36AM]
Doing well, Deliverer?

Phainon ground his teeth, resisting the urge to look. He forced his eyes back up as Councilor Rhian started a long, self-important speech.

Another pulse.

This one a quick, intense burst that made his ass clench around it and his cock throb hard enough to ache.

He pressed his thighs together, trying to pass it off like a natural shift.

New message.

[MYDEI | 9:37AM]
Picture it, your ass up, hands gripping the edge of the table. Me holding you open, making you shake.

Phainon's teeth dug into his lip so hard he tasted blood. A pulse of heat ran through his gut and down his thighs. The words hit him harder than the plug did.

Another pulse.

Another.

A cruel pattern now—fast, then slow, then a long, teasing one that made him sweat.

“Deliverer,” Rhian said, squinting at him. “You look unwell.”

Phainon winced. “Feeling fantastic, thanks.”

More vibrations.

Hot sweat gathered at his back. He could feel it—himself twitching around the toy, feel every little pulse of pleasure it sent up his spine, turning his stomach to mush.

He was close, and the worst part was how much it turned him on being this helpless in public—his cock leaking into his pants while these old bastards talked about borders.

Another message.

[MYDEI | 9:38AM]
Cross your legs.

Phainon scowled, then did it.

Big mistake.

The vibration cranked up hard the second he moved. His thighs clenched tight, his stomach spasming. He felt himself spasm around the plug, the pressure right against that spot making his eyes water.

He coughed to cover the involuntary noise that almost came out of him.

“Problem, Deliverer?”

Phainon gritted his teeth. “Not at all.”

Another message.

He barely dared look, but he did.

[MYDEI | 9:38AM]
Bet you're dripping. How about when this is over I spread those pretty thighs and see how bad it got?

Phainon's breath left him in a rush. A sickly pulse of want shot through him. His cock ached. The plug gave another cruel pulse.

He forced a laugh. "I need a drink."

And the vibration cut off.

Just like that.

Which somehow was worse.

He stared down at the teleslate.

[MYDEI | 9:39AM]
Meeting's not over yet, Deliverer. Sit still.

Phainon's hands curled into fists under the table.

He was going to kill him.

But first, he was going to let him.

Phainon didn't wait for the meeting to properly adjourn.

The second Dymas cleared his throat for "one final point of order", Phainon was already up, muttering something about patrol schedules and ducking out before anyone could stop him.

He stormed down the corridor, ignoring the inquisitive stares from passing guards. His cock still throbbed in his pants, his hole still sore and twitching from how long he'd been clenched around that godsdamn plug.

He needed air.

He needed to murder Mydei.

What the fuck was that?

Not just the plug—the messages. The texts. The very descriptive threats. The way the bastard had left him hanging in there, on edge, with no way to get himself off unless he wanted to ruin his reputation right then and there.

He cursed under his breath, rubbing a hand down his face as he turned the corner—

And stopped dead.

There.

Leaning lazily against a column like he didn't have a care in the world, Mydei.

Casually chatting with one of the captains, a faint smile on his face, one hand gesturing as he spoke.

Phainon's eye twitched.

Before his brain caught up, his body was moving. He closed the distance in a few long strides, grabbed Mydei by the back of his neck, and dragged him away from the conversation.

The captain startled, but Phainon didn't even acknowledge him.

"Apologies," Mydei said mildly over his shoulder, then let himself be pulled without resistance.

Phainon shoved him into an empty alcove, out of sight, and slammed him back against the wall—hard enough to rattle the frame of a hanging tapestry.

"You wanna tell me what that was?" Phainon hissed.

Mydei blinked at him, perfectly calm. An elegant eyebrow arched.

“I don’t follow.”

“Bullshit,” Phainon snapped, one hand still gripping the front of his jacket. “Don’t play dumb. Plug. Messages. Middle of a meeting, are you kidding me—”

Mydei tilted his head, his mouth curling at the corners.

“Oh, this sudden modesty is rich,” he mused. “A bold complaint, coming from the man who couldn’t keep his hands off me in the middle of a meeting before.”

Phainon stiffened. His grip faltered.

His brain stuttered mid-thought.

Oh.

Wait.

Wait.

“Wait…” Phainon said slowly, blinking as the pieces clicked into place. “Is this—” he gestured between them, eyes narrowing, “—revenge?”

Mydei’s lips quirked.

“I should hope it was obvious.”

Phainon’s stomach dropped in the worst, possible way.

“You—” Phainon started, but Mydei was already leaning in, fingers catching the front of Phainon’s collar and tugging him down so their faces nearly touched.

“Truly,” Mydei murmured, voice low and honey-smooth, “I’ve always wondered what half these ridiculous belts and straps you wear are for.

Seemed like a waste.”

Phainon’s throat bobbed.

Mydei hummed. “We’ll find better uses for them. Soon.”

Then he straightened, gave Phainon’s collar a satisfied tug, and stepped neatly out of his grip.

“I’ll see you later, Deliverer.”

And with that, he walked away.

Calm. Unbothered. Not a hair out of place.

Phainon stood there, leaning against the wall, staring after him like he’d been hit by a landslide.

Oh, so that’s how he’s gonna play it.

Shit.

Apparently, revenge extended to their private life too.

Phainon wasn’t even sure what specific incident this was payback for anymore. It could’ve been the time he squeezed Mydei’s ass in front of half the Council while pretending to reach for his sword. Or when he dragged him into a supply closet mid-meeting and made him come so hard he had to return to the chamber shaking.

Honestly?

There were too many to count.

He’d earned this. Whatever this was.

And currently, this was him bent awkwardly over a table in his quarters—palms flat against the cool surface, hair a mess, cheeks hot enough to scald.

His ass was bare, legs spread embarrassingly wide, and he could feel the ghost of Mydei's gaze on him without even looking.

The silence stretched.

Phainon cleared his throat, trying to keep it casual.

"You, uh… planning to just stare all night, or…?"

He heard a quiet, amused exhale behind him.

Then footsteps.

Mydei's hand skimmed up his back, stopping at the nape of his neck. He squeezed, thumb brushing idly over the skin there. When he spoke, his voice was lower than usual, smooth like dark silk.

"You nervous?"

Phainon scoffed, turning his head just enough to smirk back at him. "Pfft. Please. I'm not nervous."

Lie.

He was so fucking nervous.

Mydei hummed like he didn't believe a word of it. He leaned down, pressing a slow, almost tender kiss between Phainon's shoulder blades. The warmth of it made Phainon's stomach clench—a wordless reassurance before whatever insanity came next.

And gods, was he into that.

Then Mydei stepped back, dropping to his knees behind him without ceremony. Phainon felt the heat of his breath, the careful way those hands spread his thighs just a little more, fingers sinking into the muscle.

A pause.

Then—casually, like he was about to dig into a meal and not someone's ass—Mydei muttered,

"Hope you stretched."

Phainon choked, already halfway turning his head.

"Wha—who says that right now!?"

But Mydei was already parting his cheeks, and before Phainon could get another word out, he went in.

Hot. Wet. Filthy.

Phainon's body jolted, an embarrassingly loud sound escaping him before he could swallow it down. His hands scrabbled at the table's edge, hips twitching, but Mydei's grip was iron—pulling him right back into place.

"Didn't say you could move," came the muffled reply.

It wasn't fair how good he was at this. Mydei licked a slow, broad stripe over his hole, then circled it with the tip of his tongue, teasing, tasting. Phainon cursed under his breath, feeling his thighs tremble.

And Mydei just kept going.

Licking, spitting, sucking.

Each slick sound was filthier than the last.

"Oh gods—"

His cock was hard against the table now, leaking precum onto the polished surface. And the worst part was how into it he was, moaning like some desperate virgin as Mydei's tongue pushed inside him.

The pressure made his back arch, a groan breaking free before he could stop it.

Somewhere in the middle of it, Mydei pulled back just long enough to mutter,

“Funny… you never shut up when it’s you doing this.”

Phainon’s whole body jerked.

He opened his mouth to fire back something—a retort, a curse, anything—but then Mydei latched onto him again, tongue fucking him open with hungry, unrelenting strokes, and his brain short-circuited.

All he managed was a cracked, “Oh—Myd—Mydei—!”

His hole was slick, swollen, and twitching under the attention, the mix of tongue and spit driving him insane. Every flick, every slow grind of Mydei’s tongue sent lightning down his spine.

The wet sounds only made it worse.

He could hear it.

Phainon bit his lip hard, a bead of sweat rolling down his temple. “Y-you’re—you’re insane—”

Mydei didn’t respond. Just let out a low, pleased hum against him before sinking his teeth into the curve of his ass hard enough to leave a mark, then soothing the sting with a soft, wet kiss.

Phainon was trembling now. Legs weak. Cock throbbing and leaking in time with every drag of Mydei’s tongue.

“Holy shit—” He didn’t even know what he was saying anymore. “You’re—good at this—”

Another smug sound from behind him. Mydei licked him again slowly, like he was savoring it. His fingers massaged the backs of Phainon’s thighs idly, like he was some favorite meal being lazily picked apart.

And when Mydei finally pulled back—face flushed, mouth slick—he ran a thumb over Phainon's spit-slick rim and said quietly,

"Not done yet."

Phainon's cock twitched.

His whole body shivered.

He barely managed to croak out, "I—I'm gonna murder you."

Mydei grinned. "You can try."

And with that, he pushed Phainon's legs apart a little wider and went back down.

In hindsight, Phainon regretted giving Mydei permission to do this.

And by this, he meant:

Apparently deciding his thighs were now the most sacred thing in the universe and refusing to touch anything else.

He was stretched out on his back, hair a mess, face flushed, limbs heavy. Mydei was settled comfortably between his legs—and had been for the past hour. No cock inside him, no fingers, not even so much as a brush near his aching, flushed dick. Just endless, obsessive attention to his thighs.

It started tame enough. A few lingering kisses, the kind Phainon liked enough to enjoy. But it had escalated quickly.

Mydei's mouth was relentless—lips dragging over the skin, leaving wet, open-mouthed kisses along the sensitive flesh. Every now and then he'd nip at the inner part, close enough to make Phainon's hips jerk, but never close enough to give him what he actually wanted.

Phainon groaned, dragging a hand over his face.

“This is excessive.”

Mydei didn’t answer. Just hummed against the meat of his thigh, one palm sliding up to squeeze at the muscle with a possessive grip. He pressed his face against the inside of Phainon’s leg like he planned to live there.

Phainon sighed, head thunking back against the pillow.

It wasn’t like he hadn’t been warned.

He remembered it clear as day—about thirty minutes in, when his patience had started to fray.

“Alright, that’s enough,” Phainon had said, shifting his hips. “Get on with it.”

But Mydei, still sprawled between his legs, had looked up and said, casual as you please:

“If you let me keep going, you get free rein on my chest next time.”

And because Phainon was weak, weak man he folded immediately.

“…Fine.”

And what a mistake that was.

Now, here he was.

Mydei had Phainon’s legs pushed up, pinned open shamelessly at the knees. His cock throbbed helplessly against his own stomach, untouched, leaking precum that smeared against his skin every time he shifted.

But Mydei wasn’t paying it the slightest bit of attention.

Too busy grinding against Phainon’s thighs like an animal.

The slide of hot skin between them made Phainon groan. Mydei’s cock was hard, leaving streaks of precum along the inside of his thighs as he rocked his hips, panting quietly.

“For someone so cocky,” Mydei chuckled, teeth grazing the flesh at the curve of his thigh, “you’re a terrible tease when it’s your turn.”

Phainon cursed under his breath, biting his lip to stifle a moan when Mydei bit down, marking him again. His legs twitched, muscles flexing under Mydei’s grip.

“Look at you,” Mydei murmured, pressing his face into the crease of his thigh. “Perfect thighs. I should’ve done this years ago.”

Phainon shivered. “You gonna keep monologuing—?”

Another sharp bite, and Phainon’s words cut off in a gasp.

Mydei laughed under his breath. “I could get off on these alone,” he admitted shamelessly, hips grinding harder, precum slicking the skin between them.

It was filthy.

Vulgar how into it Mydei was—and how Phainon was starting to love it.

The worst part was how familiar this position was.

The same way Phainon used to taunt him.

Arms behind his head, legs spread, smug and infuriating while Mydei tried to keep his composure.

And now here he was—flushed, desperate, his thighs trembling under the attention while Mydei had him pinned and panting.

Phainon sighed, trying for nonchalance and failing.

“You really don’t wanna fuck me?”

Mydei grinned against his skin. “Not yet.”

The friction was maddening. The heat of Mydei's cock sliding between his thighs, the wet sounds, the constant praise. Every drag of his hips made Phainon's untouched dick twitch pathetically, and the worst part was how good it felt.

Gods, he was so close.

And then—with a final rough thrust, a low groan, Mydei came. Hot and thick between Phainon's thighs, streaking his skin, grinding through it with a shudder. He rode it out shamelessly, fucking through the high like a man possessed.

Phainon's brain short-circuited at the sensation, groaning, sure he was finally about to get some attention.

He opened his mouth—

only for Mydei to pull back, wipe his hand lazily over Phainon's thigh, and say, completely unbothered:

"Hmm. I think Aglaea mentioned needing me for something."

Phainon blinked.

"What?"

Mydei was already getting up, tucking himself away.

"Don't wait up."

And with a final, maddeningly arrogant look, he was gone.

Phainon lay there, legs still spread, cock still aching, throat working around a dry swallow.

"…You're serious!?"

Phainon honestly just wanted to buy some fruit and get the fuck back to his quarters.

The market was its usual mess—loud vendors shouting over each other, people brushing past in tight-packed crowds, and the humid air making his skin stick to his clothes. He adjusted his collar, trying to ignore the faint ache in his thighs every time he took a longer stride.

He barely made it two stalls deep before a familiar voice called out behind him.

“Yo! Deliverer!”

Phainon grimaced before he even turned.

“Partner.”

Stelle materialized out of the crowd with that shit-eating grin, dressed like she’d just rolled out of bed and didn’t care—which she probably had. Slinging an arm over his shoulder like they weren’t in the middle of the street, she peered down at the produce in his hand.

“Shopping for your boyfriend? Cute.”

“Shopping for myself,” Phainon sighed. “Did you need something?”

“Can’t a girl say hi to her favorite sanctimonious top?”

He shot her a glare.

They strolled for a few minutes, half-listening to the market sounds. Stelle grabbed a pastry from a vendor, took a bite, and talked with her mouth full.

“So,” she said around a mouthful of flaky dough, “you two switch yet?”

Phainon stumbled mid-step.

“I don’t wanna talk about it.”

“Uh huh.” She licked sugar off her thumb. “So that’s a yes.”

He groaned, dragging a hand over his face.

“Not a yes, not a no, just— I’m not discussing this in the middle of the market.”

“Kay. But like… tip number three, mind the angle, your prostate’s higher than you think.”

“Stelle—”

“Tip number four, if he starts grabbing your thighs, you’re already fucked. Metaphorically and literally.”

He groaned again, picking up his pace like that’d somehow leave her behind.

“Gods, I haven’t been able to sit properly in two days.”

“Ooh, love that for you.”

“Silence.”

Stelle just laughed, grabbing another pastry from a cart as she walked past.

“Call me if you need more advice! Or an ice pack!”

Phainon didn’t dignify that with a response, already turning the next corner, muttering under his breath.

And somewhere behind him, he swore he could still hear her shouting,

“Thighs are a blessing, Deliverer! Embrace it!”

He groaned.

This was his life now.

The room was quiet, save for the wet sounds of Phainon’s fingers working inside himself.

He was on his back, legs spread, one hand braced against his thigh, the other buried between them—clumsy, trying to figure out how the hell he was supposed to enjoy this when he felt like an idiot.

Not that it wasn’t… doing something. His hips kept twitching, his skin too hot, and every time his fingers curled a certain way, his stomach clenched tight.

Across from him, Mydei sat at the end of the bed, one ankle resting over his knee like this was a casual symposium debate and not the most humiliating thing Phainon had agreed to in his life.

“How’s it feeling?” Mydei asked, fingertips idly stroking along the inside of Phainon’s knee.

Phainon grunted, shifting his hand. “Weird. Stretchy. Kinda good.”

“You make it sound so romantic.”

Phainon shot him a glare, even as his hips jerked again.

“Shut up. You’re the one who said this was for ‘educational purposes.’”

“It is,” Mydei said, watching him lazily. “Since you’re so new to bottoming, I figured it’d be enlightening to see what it looks like.”

His eyes flicked down to where Phainon’s fingers moved, the slick sounds loud in the quiet room. “And frankly,” Mydei added, “I’m enjoying the view.”

Phainon flushed.

“You’re a beast,” he muttered, but his fingers pushed in deeper, trying to find that spot again—the one that made his toes curl, made his cock twitch against his stomach. It took a couple tries, but then—

Fuck.

There it was.

A sharp pulse of pleasure snapped through him. His lips parted, a soft sound spilling out, and his hips tilted into the sensation.

Mydei made a pleased sound in his throat, the pads of his fingers digging a little into Phainon's thigh as he watched. "There you go," he murmured. "Knew you'd get the hang of it."

"Quiet," Phainon hissed.

Honestly, after a while, it wasn't so bad. It was weirdly relaxing, in a depraved kind of way. He let his head tip back, the sensations blurring together, the pleasure building slow and steady in his belly.

He almost forgot Mydei was there.

Almost.

Which is why the click made him jump.

A sharp, unmistakable sound—a shutter.

Phainon's eyes snapped open, his head whipping toward Mydei.

And there he was, still seated at the edge of the bed, holding up his teleslate like this was just a casual photoshoot, thumb hovering over the screen.

"Did you just—"

Phainon scrambled up, yanking his fingers out with a mortified yelp, trying to cover himself with a pillow he grabbed off the bed. "Did you just take a picture?!"

Mydei didn't even flinch.

He scrolled idly with his thumb, checking the preview image.

“I assume,” Mydei said, deadpan, “you think I don’t know about the surveillance cameras you had installed in Kremnos.”

Phainon froze.

His mouth opened—closed again.

They stared at each other.

“…Fuck,” Phainon muttered, dragging a hand down his face. He let out a long, defeated groan and flopped backward, tossing the pillow aside.

“This doesn’t leave this room,” he grumbled.

Mydei gave a small, satisfied hum. “Wouldn’t dream of it.”

Then—because apparently he wasn’t done being a menace—Mydei stood, calmly adjusted one of the room lights, dimming another, then angled a third until it cast a flattering glow across Phainon’s skin.

Phainon watched him through slitted eyes.

“You’re adjusting the lighting now?”

“I want a few more,” Mydei replied, tapping his slate screen, a little smile tugging at the corners of his mouth. “And before you try to act scandalized—I also know about your archive labeled ‘Kremnos Missions.’”

Phainon let out a strangled, incoherent noise, throwing an arm over his face.

A hand brushed up his leg again, thumb circling idly near the crease of his hip.

And as much as Phainon wanted to argue, his legs stayed open.

Mydei hummed, fingertips stroking higher. “Since you’re so obliging tonight,” he mused, reaching over to grab a pillow from the head of the bed. He tossed it lazily between Phainon’s legs. “Let’s see you move on it.”

Phainon blinked. “You want me to—”

A pointed look.

Phainon sighed, resigned. He shifted, pulling the pillow down beneath him, the fabric soft against his cock. His face went hot. He adjusted his hips, awkward at first, grinding down slow, fingers still slick and buried inside him.

The friction was… good. Embarrassingly good. He bit his lip and kept moving, rutting against the pillow while fingering himself open.

A shutter click.

“New screensaver,” Mydei said, checking the shot with maddeningly casualty.

Phainon groaned, letting his head fall to the side. “I hate you.”

“You don’t.”

He kept moving anyway, hips grinding down in slow, indulgent circles, his stomach tightening every time his fingers brushed that spot deep inside. Mydei leaned in, his hand trailing up Phainon’s thigh again, thumb tracing lazy, possessive circles against his skin.

“Use your mouth too,” Mydei said.

Phainon lifted his hand, slick fingers glistening in the low light. He hesitated—then gave up, slipping them past his lips, sucking slow and lazy, tasting himself on his tongue.

Another click.

“Not bad,” Mydei murmured.

Phainon glared at him around his fingers, but it lost some of its venom when his hips jerked against the pillow again.

“You’re terrible.”

“You’ll live.”

Before he could come up with a retort, Mydei tapped his thigh. “Roll over.”

Phainon grumbled but obeyed, flopping onto his stomach. Mydei tugged his hips up, legs apart, his face half-buried in the sheets.

A pause.

“You didn’t even have to be told to arch,” Mydei remarked.

Phainon almost flipped him off.

Didn’t stop him from holding himself open, though—hands braced on his ass, stretching himself for the next round of photos as Mydei adjusted his teleslate, casually angling for different shots.

“Beast,” Phainon muttered again.

Mydei didn’t deny it. Instead, he reached down, fingers ghosting over the base of Phainon’s spine. “You like putting on a show,” he murmured.

“I do not—”

Mydei flipped the teleslate screen toward him.

Phainon froze.

There he was—spread, wet, flushed, and absolutely wrecked-looking. His stomach did something humiliating.

“Don’t pretend you don’t,” Mydei said, catching his chin in one hand, turning his face to meet his gaze. “If you’re bold enough to stalk me, you can handle this.”

Phainon scowled. “I should kill you.”

“After.”

The teleslate clicked again.

Mydei nudged him back over and gestured. “On your knees.”

Phainon sat back, straddling his own hand now, fingers still inside, hips starting a slow, shameless bounce. The stretch hit just right, his head falling back with a groan.

Another shot.

“Look at that,” Mydei murmured, recording from a low angle. “Didn’t know you could be so shameless.”

Phainon managed weakly, “Just take your pictures.”

Mydei grinned, leaning in close enough to whisper in his ear. “Oh, I intend to.”

The final shot came later, when Phainon was sprawled flat on his back again, legs over his own shoulders—or, more accurately, hooked over Mydei’s forearms as he crouched over him, two fingers still working him open, the other hand lazily stroking his cock.

Phainon was flushed and sweating, lips parted, hips jerking up into every thrust of his own hand.

“Hold it,” Mydei ordered.

Phainon clenched, back arching.

Another click. Then another.

Right as a ragged, wrecked moan spilled from his throat.

Mydei made a pleased sound. “New wallpaper.”

Phainon flopped bonelessly, panting. “Are you done yet?”

“Almost.”

Finally—finally—Mydei set the teleslate aside and leaned in, teeth sinking into the soft flesh of Phainon’s inner thigh. He bit down hard enough to make Phainon hiss, a shiver running up his spine.

Another mark along his hipbone, leaving faint bruises in his wake.

Phainon barely managed to lift his head, eyes half-lidded. “Again?”

“Mm.” Mydei hummed against his skin, another sharp bite. “You keep adjusting for me.”

Phainon sighed, closed his eyes, and shifted again, spreading his legs a little wider. “Brat.”

“Yours,” Mydei murmured, before sinking his teeth in again.

And Phainon, too far gone to care anymore, let him.

Phainon didn’t even remember how this one started.

All he knew was that at some point, his own belt had ended up wrapped around his wrists—looped tight and secured to the headboard—leaving him sprawled out across the bed, legs open, face flushed, sweat-damp hair clinging to his temples.

And Mydei, predictably, had made himself comfortable.

There he was now, lounging at the foot of the bed like a man with no conscience, one knee propped up, a slim, worn book in hand. Not a ledger, not a tactics report—no, it was that book.

The one Phainon had read to him months ago in a fit of bored cruelty. A ridiculously smutty, overblown piece of filth about some courtesan with “a mouth like sin and a cunt like salvation” if he remembered right. He’d made a whole performance of it, too—dramatic pauses, overdone line reads, the works—while fucking Mydei within an inch of his life.

He should’ve known it would come back to bite him.

The proof was currently pressing deep inside him—an unrelenting strain as Mydei casually worked a thick dildo into his ass one-handed, not even really paying attention, eyes skimming the page like this was light bedtime reading.

Phainon grit his teeth, hips twitching against the intrusion. “You’re not even looking—”

“Mmhm,” Mydei hummed absently, turning a page. “Listen to this part.”

He cleared his throat—then, with boredom, read aloud:

“He had her bent across the silk-draped chaise, her thighs trembling, her breasts flushed and heavy, the thick curve of his cock slicking in and out of her greedy little hole—”

Phainon groaned, head thumping back against the headboard. “You’re terrible.”

“And yet you’re the one tied up,” Mydei replied, unbothered, giving the dildo a deliberate twist that made Phainon’s whole body arch. “Not my fault you’ve got such memorable taste in filth.”

He flipped to another page. “Ah, this one’s good.”

Before Phainon could protest, Mydei lifted one of his legs, propping it over his shoulder, and angled the toy deeper.

Phainon hissed. “I don’t think I bend like that—”

“Then we’ll find out together,” Mydei said, uncharacteristically cheerful.

Another page turn.

“Her lover pressed her legs to her chest, splitting her open, his tongue worshipping every inch of her flushed—”

Mydei paused, thoughtful. “We should try that later.”

“Mydeimo—”

A slow drag of the toy made Phainon choke on the rest of the sentence.

Mydei let the book rest open on his thigh, idly adjusting the angle of the dildo with a few testing thrusts. The lewd sounds filled the room.

Phainon could feel every inch of it—the unrelenting press against his sweet spot, and the humiliating way his body clenched down around it. His cock lay flushed and hard against his stomach, leaking steadily.

Another passage caught Mydei’s eye.

“He tongued the pucker of her ass until she sobbed for more, her hole slick and fluttering—”

Mydei gave a satisfied little hum. “Actually, yeah. We are doing that later.”

Phainon groaned, tugging uselessly at his bound wrists.

“Shouldn’t have read this to me if you didn’t want a live reenactment,” Mydei pointed out as he slid the toy in deep and left it there, grinding the base against Phainon’s ass.

Then, casually, he shifted positions—tossing Phainon’s other leg over his shoulder, angling him open further. The stretch was insane.

He snapped the book shut with one hand. “Time for the ‘tightest fit possible’ chapter.”

“You’re making that up.”

“Am I?” Mydei smirked, settling in, his free hand sliding up Phainon’s thigh to grip his hip.

And honestly, at this point—Phainon couldn’t even muster a convincing glare. His skin burned, his pulse pounded, and when the toy started moving again—slow, deliberate, relentless—all he could do was groan, back arching as pleasure stole the breath from his lungs.

Mydei flipped the book open again.

“Page sixty-nine,” he announced. “Poetic.”

Phainon hated him.

He absolutely loved him.

A hand brushed over Phainon’s wrist where it was pinned against the mattress, thumb rubbing over the raw dent left by the belt. A gentle drag. Then, with a soft clink of the buckle, the leather came loose.

Phainon blinked, slowly flexing his fingers as they were freed.

“Mercy at last?” he rasped, stretching his arms overhead with a languid arch of his back. “Didn’t think you had it in you.”

He flashed a crooked grin.

Mydei didn’t rise to the bait.

Didn’t even look up, really. Just leaned over, opened the nightstand drawer—or maybe a satchel left tossed nearby—and pulled out a small, battered book.

“Since you like reading so much,” Mydei said, tone maddeningly casual as he dropped it onto Phainon’s chest, “go ahead. Keep yourself entertained while I get this next thing ready.”

Phainon caught it without thinking.

He let it sit there for a beat, the worn leather cover cool against his flushed skin, then thumbed it open one-handed.

He expected more of the same filth as before—maybe another trashy story about farmhands, or something equally stupid Mydei thought would get a rise out of him.

And for a second, it was normal. His eyes skimming without focus, shoulders loose.

Until the shape of the handwriting tugged at something.

It was his.

Not similar to his, but his. The quick, looping scrawl, the slant of certain letters, the shorthand notes scribbled in the margins.

It took a beat to register.

For a long, terrible second, Phainon's brain blue-screened. No thoughts, no witty remarks—just pure static and the overwhelming awareness that the worst possible object in the entire damn world was now sitting in his lap.

A little smudged on the edges, pages warped from the years. A book of his own filthy, increasingly depraved personal scenarios—things scribbled down on sleepless nights, things he only thought about alone.

His stomach bottomed out so hard he almost felt lightheaded.

A pause.

And from the corner of his eye, Mydei glanced over—casually adjusting something on the nightstand—and let a smirk tug at the corner of his mouth.

"I thought it sounded familiar," Mydei mused.

A perfectly timed line, said like it wasn't a death sentence.

Phainon, for one brief, horrible, perfect second, considered setting the entire room on fire.

Or stabbing Mydei in the neck.

Or himself.

Or both.

Or grabbing the book, vaulting out the window, and never speaking of this again.

None of which he did.

He just stared at the page, feeling his soul slowly leave his body.

"…You gonna read it, or should I?" Mydei asked.

Phainon let out a long breath, closing his eyes briefly.

Fuck it.

He wasn't a coward.

He flipped to the first full passage, let his eyes skim down the lines—and immediately wished he hadn't.

"Out loud," Mydei said from somewhere nearby, a gentle nudge against Phainon's ankle.

Phainon gritted his teeth.

"Seriously?"

"Mmhm. Read."

Fine.

He cleared his throat, jaw clenching as he began, voice stiff.

"Push me open slow, stretch me until I'm shaking—till I'm too full to think, stuffed knuckle-deep and begging for more. I want it messy, want to feel it split me wide, want to—"

Phainon didn’t make it halfway down the page before the words hit him all at once.

A mortified groan clawed out of his throat as he grabbed a pillow and smothered his face under it, the book falling uselessly to his side.

“I hate this.”

Mydei chuckled.

An infuriating, genuine, delighted sound.

Phainon felt the bed dip as Mydei moved closer, fingers hooking the pillow and giving it a light tug.

“C’mon,” Mydei drawled, “don’t stop now. It was just getting good.”

“Go die.”

“I mean, I could…” Mydei’s voice dropped lower, “or…”

Phainon tensed when those same hands slid down his sides and gripped his thighs—thumbs pressing against the crease of his hips, nudging them open.

And then, without preamble, Mydei slid two fingers inside him, pushing deep in a single thrust.

Phainon choked on a noise, pillow still pressed against his face.

“See,” Mydei murmured, leaning in, voice right against his ear now, “not quite knuckle-deep yet. But we can work on that.”

Phainon’s back arched involuntarily, hips lifting to meet the press of those fingers.

“Mydei,” he gasped.

Mydei twisted his wrist, scissoring him open, a slow, steady stretch that made heat curl low in Phainon’s gut.

“You write this and then act surprised when it turns you on,” Mydei sighed, nipping at the line of his jaw.

“Wasn’t for you,” Phainon gritted out, though his voice broke halfway through, another moan slipping free when Mydei crooked his fingers just right.

Mydei hummed, pleased.

“Doesn’t matter now.”

He set a lazy, torturous rhythm—pushing in deep, dragging out slow—a rhythm so good it made Phainon’s toes curl against the sheets, made his whole body tense and soften in turn.

And when Mydei’s free hand slid up, cupping the back of his neck, tilting his face toward him, Phainon barely resisted.

“Want me to keep going?” Mydei asked.

And Phainon was a weak man.

Without a word, he reached out, grabbed the book again with trembling fingers, and flipped to the next page.

And Mydei, smiling against his skin, went right back to work.

Phainon took a shaky breath, forcing the words out.

“Two fingers first,” he read, and his stomach dropped because he remembered this one. “Tease till he’s panting for it, then three, slow stretch —make him feel how good his body can take it.”

The shame came sharp and cold and molten-hot all at once, especially when Mydei’s third finger pushed inside just as the words left his mouth.

Phainon bit down a sound, his hips twitching against the bed.

“Keep going,” Mydei said, like he wasn’t currently wrist-deep in moral corruption.

Phainon gritted his teeth and stared at the page, the words somehow worse now than when he’d written them.

“Press your knuckles in one by one, let him fight it a little, then give it to him—slow, deep, all the way up until he can’t think of anything but how full he is.”

His voice cracked halfway through, and Mydei grinned against his throat.

“Inventive mind you’ve got,” Mydei said, crooking his fingers, and Phainon choked on a whimper, head dropping forward.

“I wrote it for me,” Phainon protested weakly.

“I know. That’s what makes this better.”

He felt Mydei’s hand pull back, glossy fingers gliding free—only for a moment—before both hands spread him open wider. A thick curl of fingers pressed back in, three, four, a firm, unrelenting push.

Phainon made a moaned as the stretch burned sweet and sharp, his whole body tensing, toes curling against the sheets.

“Mydei,” he gasped, face burning.

“Just like you wrote it, huh?” Mydei teased, working him open at a steady, unhurried pace. “Almost there.”

Phainon couldn’t decide if he wanted to die or live in this moment forever.

The sounds of lube and skin filled the air as Mydei worked deeper, the stretch maddening. He knew exactly what he was doing, dragging his knuckles against that spot that made Phainon’s hips jerk up again and again, a soft, desperate sound breaking loose every time.

Phainon forced his blurry gaze down to the page again, determined not to tap out.

Mydei's voice was velvet-dark at his ear. "Read the next line."

Phainon didn't want to.

But he did.

"Hold him down while you fist him open," he read, voice barely there now, "slow and deep, watch his stomach jump every time you push. Tell him he's taking it so well."

He groaned, throwing an arm over his face, but Mydei's hand was relentless —pushing in until the stretch turned sharp, and then gave, his whole wrist sliding inside, snug and perfect.

Phainon's breath hitched, a ragged, desperate moan leaving him unguarded.

"Would you look at that," Mydei said, almost to himself. "Fits you better than I thought it would."

The burn turned to unbearable pleasure, pressure blooming deep inside as Mydei fucked him open with slow, steady pumps, his fist curling and twisting just enough to drag unholy noises from Phainon's throat.

His hips rolled helplessly, chasing every movement, and Phainon barely recognized himself like this.

He didn't even notice Mydei reaching for the book again until it was plucked from his limp hand.

The bed shifted, Mydei sitting up with a pleased little hum, scanning down the rest of the page.

"Well," Mydei said with a grin, "the ending's good too."

Phainon made a strangled noise of protest.

But then—a snap as the book closed in Mydei’s hand.

“We’ll pick up where you left off next time.”

“No,” Phainon groaned, sagging boneless into the bed, his hips still twitching around Mydei’s wrist.

“Mmhm,” Mydei said, leaning down to press a biting kiss on his neck. “Yes.”

He flinched when fingers carded slowly through his hair, brushing sweat-damp strands from his face.

“Still with me?” Mydei asked softly.

Phainon let out a low, mangled groan into the sheets.

A chuckle. Mydei leaned in, lips grazing his temple.

“Good,” he said. A beat. “’Cause you haven’t had my cock yet.”

Phainon choked.

Literally choked, breath catching hard in his throat as his head snapped up, eyes wide and wrecked.

“You—are you serious?”

Mydei just pressed a mocking kiss to the corner of his open, trembling mouth. “What, thought I was done with you?”

“I—I’ve never—” Phainon started, and hated how his voice shook.

“I know.” Mydei’s thumb brushed along his jaw, a steadying touch that made the stone in his chest feel lighter. “I’m not gonna hurt you.”

A pause. Then, quieter, lips against his ear:

“I wonder if you’ll even recall it by the time I’m done.”

Phainon barely had time to brace before Mydei's hand gripped his jaw, dragging him into a kiss that was nothing like the ones earlier. Their teeth clicked, saliva slick between their mouths, Mydei's tongue licking deep like he was trying to taste the desperate sounds catching in Phainon's throat.

Phainon groaned, clinging to him, nails digging half-heartedly into his back as his hips shifted, cock brushing hot against Mydei's stomach. The slow stroke of Mydei's hand around him made him curse, biting at Mydei's lip, only to be met with a pleased noise and a sharp squeeze in return.

"You still with me?" Mydei asked against his mouth, words dragging over spit-slick skin.

Phainon managed a breathless, "yeah," even as his pulse hammered.

"Good," Mydei hummed. His hand slid down, grabbed his thigh, and hiked it up before settling between his legs, the press of his cock heavy against Phainon's stretched, oversensitive hole. "Tell me if it's too much."

Phainon's fingers dug into his shoulders like a man about to be thrown off a cliff.

"Just—do it."

Mydei obliged.

"As you wish."

And with no more ceremony than that, he rolled his hips forward, the fat head of his cock breaching tight heat. The feeling made Phainon's breath stutter out raggedly, teeth gritted, the ache sharp but the burn good, so good he didn't know whether to swear or sob.

"Mydei—" he gasped, nails scoring Mydei's back.

"Easy," Mydei shushed, palm stroking along Phainon's side in reassurance as he pressed deeper. "You're taking it."

Another inch, another agonizing, perfect inch.

“Look at you.” A low, near reverent murmur against his skin. “You’re taking it better than I expected. Though I suppose I shouldn’t be surprised.”

Phainon made a strangled sound—one he’d never admit was half from how good it felt and half from how fucked his pride was.

He still hadn’t bottomed out yet.

The drag of thick cock over tender, worked-open flesh made Phainon’s whole body twitch, the burn sharp and heady in a way that made his cock leak against his belly.

And then—Mydei groaned.

“Damn,” he muttered, rough in a way he almost never let slip. His fingers tightened against Phainon’s thigh. “You’re still tight.”

Phainon flushed from throat to hairline, the color blooming bright, painfully visible.

“Shut—”

“What, you thought I wouldn’t say it?” Mydei snorted. “You’d tell me every time you stretched me out.”

Phainon whined like a man mortally wounded.

“Relax,” His voice dipped softer as he leaned in, palm stroking along Phainon’s side before catching his hand, fingers lacing tight. “Breathe.”

He gave it another push, the slide making Phainon’s legs twitch, his whole body hot and trembling around it. It was overwhelming in a way that made him want to curse and beg in equal measure, though his pride would snap before he admitted either.

Gods, he was full.

So full.

Mydei eased halfway in, and then, stopped.

The bastard just stayed there, holding Phainon wide open around him like he had nowhere else to be.

Phainon squirmed, shifting his hips, desperate for more friction, more movement—but Mydei only watched him with that maddening, composed expression.

“You fidget like this when you fuck me too,” Mydei spoke, leaning down to mouth lazily along Phainon’s throat. “Never had the patience for your own games.”

“Mydeimos if you don’t move—”

He didn’t get to finish.

Mydei gave a single, sharp thrust deeper, another inch, and Phainon made a wrecked, half-strangled sound as his back arched, legs tightening around Mydei’s waist.

“Breathe,” Mydei ordered agan. His hand squeezed around Phainon’s, grounding him. “No need to rush.”

It took a few long, shaky breaths before Phainon’s muscles eased, the sting melting into filthy, electric pleasure. His fingers flexed, squeezing Mydei’s hand once.

That was all Mydei needed.

He hummed, then dragged almost all the way out—leaving Phainon empty and already clenching down around nothing—before slamming home in a single, brutal thrust.

Phainon’s vision went white.

His head dropped back with a wordless cry as his whole body clenched, stars bursting behind his eyes.

“Good,” Mydei said against his throat, lips brushing hot over sweat-damp skin. “That’s better.”

Mydei hadn’t even properly started yet, just buried deep, hips flush to Phainon’s ass, the base of his cock grinding against the overworked rim of muscle still spasming around him.

Every twitch made Phainon whimper.

There was a squelch every time Mydei shifted just a little, letting his cock drag in place.

Then Mydei started moving.

Slowly, the long pull back making Phainon’s rim clutch desperately around him, only to be filled again with a sharp, driving thrust that knocked the breath clean out of his lungs.

Gods. It was too much—slick, punishing friction dragging over every oversensitive nerve, the stretch of his hole still raw from Mydei’s fist earlier and now split wide again on a cock that felt like it could ruin him.

And Mydei moved like he knew it.

Every stroke hit deep, the kind of deep that left Phainon gasping, his thighs trembling. His cock slapped wetly against his own belly, untouched and leaking, each thrust jolting it with a fresh spurt of precome.

His teeth scraped down the lobe before he pressed a kiss to the flushed skin behind it. “You’ve never been this quiet.”

Phainon managed a garbled sound and tried to glare up at him—only to break again when Mydei rolled his hips in a grinding circle, the head of his cock catching perfectly on that swollen, aching bundle of nerves inside.

His back arched, whole body tensing as a sharp, near-painful pleasure spiked up his spine.

The sounds were downright dirty now—wet, slick, shameless, every thrust forcing a hungry, desperate clench around Mydei's cock, every drag out leaving him stretched and aching and greedy for the next.

And Mydei watched him, the whole time. Cool, unhurried, his hand trailing down to grip Phainon's thigh and haul it higher, opening him wider. He moved like a man admiring his favorite painting while slowly defacing it.

When Phainon clenched down hard on a particularly vicious thrust, Mydei let out a ragged breath and didn't stop—hips snapping in a brutal, relentless pace that left Phainon a limp, trembling wreck beneath him.

"Good," Mydei praised, leaning in to catch Phainon's lips in a filthy, open-mouthed kiss, teeth dragging over his lower lip before diving in again, tongues desperate. The noise of it was shameless—wet and lewd, spit smeared between their mouths as Phainon moaned into him.

Somewhere in the haze, Mydei reached between them and gripped Phainon's cock, glossy with precome. He stroked it hard and fast, matching the tempo of his thrusts, the double assault reducing Phainon to a mess of breathless curses and choked moans.

And then—then—Mydei shifted his angle, one hand bracing Phainon's hip up, and drove in deep enough to make something electric burst behind his eyes.

Phainon cried out, his whole body locking up around him, the spasming tightness making Mydei groan aloud.

"Beautiful," Mydei breathed, like it wasn't the dirtiest thing either of them had ever done.

He pulled almost all the way out, then slammed back in with a brutal, punishing snap of his hips—again, again, again—until Phainon was wrecked and raw around him.

His thighs were trembling, streaked with bite marks, his cock an angry red, leaking steadily, and Mydei never let up.

“Taking me so well,” Mydei whispered against his ear, one hand threading through sweat-damp hair, tugging his head back to bare his throat. “I should’ve done this to you ages ago.”

Another thrust, devastatingly deep.

Phainon’s fingers clawed at Mydei’s back, leaving faint crescent marks.

“F-fuck—” he gasped, throat hoarse, voice cracked.

“Language,” he scolded, before slamming in again.

The sensation was unbearable—the thick weight of cock grinding deep, the sound of it making his stomach clench, the rhythm relentless until every part of him felt molten.

And still, Mydei held him steady, taking his time, savoring every noise Phainon made, every twitch and tremor and desperate clutch of his body around him.

He wouldn’t stop until Phainon shattered.

And Phainon, for all his stubborn pride, was very, very close.

He shifted his weight, hips grinding down into Phainon one last time before pulling out slow, letting the heavy length of his cock drag from the clutch of Phainon’s body. Phainon let out a raw, broken sound—half relief, half protest.

But then Mydei reached for the nightstand.

Phainon’s stomach immediately sank.

“No,” he croaked, seeing what Mydei’s hand curled around—that damn plug from earlier, the one nearly as thick at the base as Mydei’s wrist, glinting wetly in the low light. “No, you’re not serious. There’s no—no way it’ll—”

“Really?” Mydei said idly, holding the thing up like a sommelier inspecting a fine vintage. The toy caught the lamplight, a drop of lube sliding slow down its length. “After all this? You surprise me.”

Phainon’s legs already starting to edge closed, but Mydei caught his knee and pushed it open again like it was nothing.

“Wait—Mydei, I can’t—”

“You can,” Mydei said, his voice making the hair at the nape of Phainon’s neck stand on end. He leaned in, lips brushing the corner of Phainon’s jaw, letting the plug’s tip nudge against the overworked rim of his hole.

Phainon made a mortified sound.

“But,” Mydei continued, “I’m feeling generous.”

The plug withdrew. Phainon sagged in immediate, weak-boned relief—only for Mydei’s free hand to slide low, fingers curling lazily around his neglected cock.

It was a mess. Red, aching, leaking copiously, every nerve along the shaft painfully alive.

“I’ll spare you… for now,” he stroked a thumb over the swollen head. “But you’ll have to ask nicely.”

Phainon’s lips parted. Nothing came out. His throat was dry, pulse hammering in his ears.

Damn it.

He dragged a trembling breath in, tipped his head away, cheeks flushed hot.

“Mydei—”

“Yes?”

“Touch me,” he muttered.

“Louder.”

Phainon grit his teeth. Swallowed. “Touch me. Please.”

It was barely above a whisper, but it was there. The kind of thing that might’ve made him laugh in any other context, if his whole body wasn’t already overstimulated.

“Was that so hard?” he asked, finally wrapping a firm hand around Phainon’s cock and stroking him slow, like he had all the time in the world.

Phainon gasped, hips stuttering up into the grip. The sensation was almost too much, his cock heavy and hypersensitive, every stroke sending sharp spikes of pleasure through his gut.

And Mydei watched him, fingers gliding over the slick shaft.

Phainon groaned, biting down on the heel of his hand.

The sounds were unforgivable—every pump of Mydei’s hand making a vulgar noise between them. His thumb swiped over the head, gathering the spill of precome and smearing it down the length in a tight twist.

Phainon nearly sobbed.

“Next time,” Mydei whispered, lips brushing the curve of his ear, “we’ll see how you do with both.”

The implication of the plug dragged along the inside of his thigh was not lost on him.

And Phainon, trembling and panting, let out a wrecked moan when Mydei’s hand gave an extra hard, twisting stroke right under the head—his whole body arching, so close, so fucking close.

“Good,” Mydei purred, voice still steady somehow. “That’s better.”

Mydei’s hand kept working him through it, every slow pump milking another twitch from Phainon’s cock, the skin flushed an angry, overworked

red. Each twist of his wrist was precision, thumb dragging over the slit to smear the leak around the head before curling down to squeeze the base.

Phainon's hips bucked weakly, the overstimulation like fire licking up his spine.

"Fuck—" he choked, voice cracking, his head tipping back against the pillow as his stomach clenched.

He barely got the word out before it hit—a sharp, brutal climax that slammed through him so hard his vision whited out. His cock jerked in Mydei's grip, thick ropes spilling messily over his stomach and Mydei's knuckles, and still that damned hand kept moving, working him through it like he wasn't already shaking apart.

Phainon slumped with a strangled moan, limp and boneless, breath sawing ragged through his throat.

"Mydei—shit, wait, you'll kill me—"

"You'll live."

Phainon groaned into the pillow, too tired to move much when Mydei shifted his legs apart again, resettling him into a loose sprawl. He barely registered it, only that something was adjusting his thigh up and dragging along his rim.

It wasn't until his brain stuttered back into gear that he remembered—Mydei hadn't come yet.

And as much as every muscle in his body felt like liquid, he wasn't about to leave his partner wanting.

Phainon dragged a hand up, combing sluggishly through his hair. "I can… straddle you," he suggested. "Could ride you a little."

Mydei hummed, palm stroking over the inside of his thigh like he was considering it.

“You’re exhausted,” he pointed out.

Phainon cracked a grin, even if his eyelids barely lifted. “Then do whatever you want instead.”

That earned a brief laugh. A quiet moment followed—Mydei’s knuckles brushing over Phainon’s cheek, then the press of a kiss to his temple.

Phainon chuckled, a little rough and breathless, but undeniably fond.

“Sappy,” he muttered.

“Deeply,” Mydei agreed, before settling between his legs.

And then there wasn’t room for any more words.

Mydei lined himself up again, one hand guiding his cock to the wrecked clutch of Phainon’s hole, the other splaying across his hip. He pushed in, slow at first, the stretch somehow worse now with how raw and used Phainon was.

The head popped past the rim with a wet sound, and Phainon let out a soft moan.

“You’re still tight,” Mydei said, not even bothering to sound surprised anymore.

He didn’t wait for permission.

One smooth, forceful roll of his hips and Mydei shoved himself deep—the friction making the both of them hiss. Phainon’s hands scrabbled weakly at the sheets, his brain fogged and heat-drenched, body pliant and trembling.

And gods, Mydei used him.

It wasn’t rough in the sharp, brutal way Phainon half-expected. It was slow, heavy, hips grinding deep with every roll, dragging his cock out to the rim before sinking back in. The slide of it was constant, his pace steady like he could fuck him for hours and would.

Phainon’s eyes fluttered shut, every muscle loose, his body rocked with each thrust while he made no move to stop it. There was something mind-numbing about it—the steady stretch, the thick drag of cock inside him, the weight of Mydei’s body pressing his thighs apart.

His own cock gave a weak, aching twitch against his stomach. He barely had it in him to care.

Mydei didn’t speak much now. Just soft, approving little sounds when Phainon clenched down around him, one hand lazily guiding his hips into position, adjusting him like a favored toy.

And Titans, the look on his face—that barely-there smirk, dark eyes heavy-lidded and drinking him in like he was something exquisite.

The thick press of Mydei’s cock hit deep again, grinding over that raw, abused spot inside him, and Phainon let out a cracked, helpless moan.

Somewhere in the haze, he felt Mydei’s hand thread with his again—steady, the squeeze firm as he rocked deep one last time, burying himself to the hilt.

And when Mydei finally came, it was with a pleased sigh, hips grinding tight against Phainon’s ass as he spilled deep inside.

The pulse of it made Phainon’s oversensitive body shudder, warmth spreading through him in thick, liquid heat.

He barely registered it when Mydei stayed there, keeping him full, his breath ghosting against Phainon’s ear as he murmured,

“Perfect.”

And Phainon, so far gone he couldn’t lift his head, managed a slurred, contented,

“Told you.”

For a long moment, neither of them moved.

Their breaths mingled in the hot, sex-heavy air, sweat cooling on skin flushed and marked up, Mydei's weight still settled firm between Phainon's thighs, his cock buried deep inside him.

Phainon let his eyes drift shut, too sated to care about anything beyond the warm ache in his limbs and the dull, pleasant burn deep in his gut. His muscles twitched with every small pulse of aftershock that rippled through him.

He was vaguely aware of Mydei's fingers brushing hair from his brow, then the slow shift of his hips as he started to pull out.

It wasn't much—just an inch or two, enough for the drag of him to scrape sensitive nerves and leave Phainon's lurching with a soft, startled noise. His legs reacted before his brain did, a sharp, involuntary clench around Mydei's waist that stopped him short.

Mydei blinked down at him, arching one brow. "Mm?"

Phainon cleared his throat, utterly shameless. "Just… few more minutes," he muttered, lashes heavy over flushed, drowsy eyes. "Feels good."

A beat passed.

Then Mydei sighed—that long-suffering, indulgent sigh he only gave when he was half-exasperated but secretly pleased.

"Of course you would," he murmured, leaning down to kiss the corner of Phainon's mouth. "Fine."

He settled back down, the press of his cock still thick and perfect inside him, one hand lazily stroking along Phainon's thigh while the other combed through his hair.

Neither of them spoke after that. No need. The room was a mess, both of them a disaster, and they were both too well-fucked to care. Phainon turned his head enough to nose at Mydei's jaw, the corners of his lips pulling into the faintest, smug little smile.

And Mydei let him have it.

They stayed tangled like that, slick and sticky and breathless, until the sweat cooled and Phainon's body stopped trembling quite so hard. Mydei only moved to press another kiss to his brow, a hand smoothing over his back.

"Few more minutes," Phainon promised, even though neither of them believed it.

And Mydei—because he was the worst kind of soft for him—didn't argue.

End Notes

Mmm the noose looks mighty fine this evening.

Please drop by the Archive and comment to let the creator know if you enjoyed their work!